Four generations face a family secret kept since 1930, in gangland Chicago. The key to the story comes from Katie Corbett. Ghosts fill her dreams, unearthing the truth they want to reveal.

More dreams bring together the separated strands of her family, as the ghosts make themselves known. While trying to solve a homicide case, Detective James Kasel is drawn into the family's history with the mob.

The interconnected puzzle pieces emerge, requiring a skilled combination of modern science and good police work.

Bridget Ferrari spent her adolescence in Ireland, where her mother was a psychic. When she returned to the United States, the author heard many interesting stories from family members in the Chicago Police Department. After the murder of her husband, she raised their two sons alone, earning a living as a beauty salon owner.

As a member of the Florida Writers Association, she can finally pursue a writing career at this time in her life.
