Far from Home: One Woman's Story of Her Life in South Texas. Eny Samuel enjoyed a life of privilege nearly all her life. With a devoted and loving family, she attended some of the best private schools in Kenya and England, and enjoyed vacations abroad. Hers was a life most could only dream of at that time. It wasn't until she married Dezo Nondo, a handsome yet calculating charmer, that her life as she knew it turned into a seemingly endless nightmare. This candid memoir is a mother's way of preparing her young son for the challenges he may face in his life. It poses questions about race and racism, relationships, and the identity crisis multi-racial kids often face especially those from broken homes. It's a lesson for a son on how an individual's difficult childhood can define his/her adulthood, for better rather than for worse-that it's a choice. Last, but not least, it is an exposé of one woman's experience with the unjust judicial system of Hidalgo County.

A touching story of a mother's strength

By Amazon Customer

I cannot comprehend the pain this MOTHER went through while fighting for the custody of a child that she carried for nine months!!! A vivid narration of a mother's struggle dealing with a vindictive ex-husband, a corrupt and biased court system and dysfunctional in-laws. It is heart-wrenching to go through the journey with her as you read the memoir. Ostracized by the ex's family she still rises above and continues to fight and live for her son. The injustices she endured in the corrupt court system are appalling!!! She persevered through it all!!! The story is touching, funny at times, sad and thought provoking. Kudos to her showing that a MOTHER NEVER GIVES UP!!! An amazing portrayal of a woman's strength even when the world is crushing down. I highly recommend it. This is a great book for men and women in and out of relationships. Lesson: do not ignore little 'red flags'!!! Where there is smoke...

THANK YOU!!

By Kale

This is a great book for everyone who is married and looking to get married. It is also for parents, in-laws, siblings and people in the legal system representing Family Law. It covers a story of a mentally stable woman who crossed borders to settle with her new husband in a foreign country. She takes us through the divorce struggles she endured alone (away from her family) and in the process lost her child in a corrupt legal system.

I stopped everything for the day to finish this book. I could not put it down! It is sad, yet funny and informative. I connected with author's pain, cry, and anger for justice. Wow, what a way to release all that emotion in a form of a book!

Her story makes me beg the question whether there should be a screenings process to qualify the type of lawyers required to represent Family Law. It is the most emotional time for the parties involved. It is unfortunate that a few lawyers use this opportunity to enrich themselves instead of providing guidance and best care to their client and all those that are involved during this process.

My advice and the key things I take from reading this book is that, the background of people matter more than anything else when selecting our partner. It has to be the number one thing to consider, because we can never change their past experiences that make them who they are today. If you do not share similar values, or upbringing, conflicts are prone to arise. What is normal for you, is not necessarily Ok for your partner and vice versa. You can lose your identity trying to blow out fire left, right and center. Tell tell signs are always there.....God whispers he never fails to...the Universe will knock at our door, sometimes loud and sometimes it will feel like a cold breeze or chills. Let's tune in to our inner self and listen to the guidance that exists within us. Trust, believe and honor the feelings and doubts that you have. This is how we can align ourselves to our soul's purpose.

I hope the author finds the armor of God, the Universe and all that there is, to guide her, protect her, comfort her and find genuine love again. Eventually all things work together for the good. I send her Blessings!
